

IOPSA Digital Media House Rules

The Institute of Plumbing SA (IOPSA) prides itself on being a professional regulatory entity that are transparent and ethical. IOPSA works proactively to promote plumbing practices that protect the health and safety of the community.

We want to hear from both our members and the public, and invite all to share, comment or post to our social media or digital platforms. At the same time, we expect that all shares, comments or posts are lawful, respectful, non-offensive and tolerant of others.

Remembering that any share, comment or post made either in a public or private domain can have negative consequences and reside in cyber space for many years to come, please adhere to the following rules:

IOPSA will not tolerate, without limitation, shares, comments or posts which are:

- Unlawful, defamatory, harassing, profane, threatening, abusive, discriminatory, racist, sexist, homophobic or hateful.
- Pornographic, obscene, indecent, lewd or suggestive.
- Infringing on intellectual property rights or personality rights of others.
- Encouraging or assisting the commission of any criminal act.
- Invading privacy rights and unlawfully disclosing personal information of others (such as contact details).
- Unsolicited promotions, advertising or spam.
- Otherwise objectionable in the absolute discretion of the PIRB.

If you notice that any of the above rules have been violated, please notify IOPSA by means of emailing a complaint in good faith to info@iopsa.org and we will investigate the complaint as a matter of urgency.

If any of the above rules are violated, IOPSA reserves the right to ban a user from any of our digital platforms.
